LOUIS MARSHALL

Several weeks ago American Jewry celebrated the seventieth birthday of Louis D. Brandeis. This week it has had occasion to hail another of its great men—Louis Marshall has also turned seventy.

It is hardly believable that Marshall is already a septuagenarian. Scarcely a day passes but his name figures in the Jewish press as doing this thing or that thing for his fellow-Jews. His capacity for work, his energy and zeal seem to be undiminished. Marshall is now at the height of his powers.

Brandeis is a legend. He approaches the problems of Jewdom as an [illegible] scholar. He interprets the significance of Jewish life as being that of the functioning of a national entity. He elaborates the implications of this idea, and arrives at the position of Zionism. He becomes a consistent and thorough-going Zionist. His path is straight and clear, guided by the canons of logical necessity. A strong character, he invests his interest in Zionism with the full force of his personality. Brandeis does not hesitate to break with the traditions of his caste and soon becomes a leader in Zionism.

Marshall has never theorized about Jewish problems. He merely lives the life of a Jew. He envisages Jewism as a simple proposition. Jews have a religion which is unlike that of their neighbours. He is faithful to his religion. Jews, though citizens of America, have different sets of communal requirements and corresponding institutions. He participates zealously in these communal interests. Jews, as members of a race or adherents of a religious faith, have affiliations with other members of the group outside of America. He is acutely aware of his relationship with the people and concerns himself with their lot. In the main, the fate of his fellow-Jews in Europe is one of suffering and persecution. Marshall conceives it his duty as a man to do his utmost to alleviate their distress. In America Jews are often misunderstood and subjected to subtle discrimination. Marshall employs his great talents toward promoting a proper appreciation of the Jews and combating the nascent anti-Semitism. Marshall is emotional. Jewish existence is to him a series of misfortunes and dangers. In the fullness of his humanism he is ever ready to battle for the security and happiness of his fellow-Jews.

That there are deeper forces at play in Jewish life giving it meaning and value, Marshall never seemed able fully to appreciate. The nationalist movement, the religious tendency bearing a distinctly Jewish colouring, the cultural forces that are stirring Jewish life—these phenomena have left him indifferent. To be sure, Marshall has at times lent a helping hand to Zionist endeavours. It was he who first answered Weizmann's call to American non-Zionists to enter the ranks of the Jewish Agency—but he never grasped the more elusive content of Zionist ideology. Having failed to penetrate into the deeper meaning of Jewish cultural [illegible], Marshall fell short of being a true leader of American Jewry. To be leader, one must be conscious of the ideal significance of the forces one would lead. Marshall is the great [illegible] of American Jewry. He represents its finest qualities of communal responsibility and devotion.

THE SEVENTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF HOLY BLOSSOM—THE OLDEST SYNAGOGUE IN ONTARIO

BY RABBI FERDINAND M. ISSERMAN

Eleven years before Confederation, in the year 1856, seventeen men in the City of Toronto, to whom Judaism mattered, organized the congregation which to-day is known as the Holy Blossom Synagogue. Prior to the organization of this congregation, the only Jewish institution in the City of Toronto or in the Province of Ontario had been a committee of a few Jews who had banded together to purchase land for a cemetery. In September, 1856, there were perhaps but a score of Jewish families in Toronto. To-day there are about eight thousand. At that time Toronto's first Jewish synagogue met in a rented room over Coombs' drug store, on Richmond and Yonge Streets. To-day there are a score of congregations in the city, a number of them with capacity for more than one thousand worshippers. The seventeen charter members of Holy Blossom, in their wildest dreams, could not have foreseen the rapid growth and development of the Jewish community in Toronto and Ontario.

Since the day of its organization Holy Blossom has served the Jewish and the general community. It has inspired its members with the highest ideals, and has spurred them on to civic, philanthropic and educational service. It has never been narrow or selfish in its ministering. Its portals have always been wide open—Gentile as well as Jew have found solace and spiritual strength within its four walls. Its religious school has admitted all who came to it and asked for Jewish knowledge. No poor child was ever turned away by its teachers, so that to-day there are hundreds of men and women throughout Toronto who received their love for Judaism and appreciation for spiritual values from the rabbis and teachers of Holy Blossom. Even though many of these are not to-day members of Holy Blossom, they have gone to other synagogues and the training they received in Holy Blossom has helped them in the newer congregations.

The respect and esteem of the non-Jewish community Holy Blossom has always held. As the years rolled on, it began to be recognized, and is recognized to-day as one of the important religious institutions of the city. Its rabbis are called to all civic events. They have participated in all communal undertakings. They have been the spokesmen for the Jew before the general public. Their lectures on Jewish beliefs and on current moral problems have attracted many Christians and have been a factor in the life of the community. It has never been an unusual thing to see two hundred or more non-Jews present at the Friday evening services. Holy Blossom has not stagnated internally. Seventy years ago it was an orthodox congregation. Thirty-seven years ago the entering wedge to reform was made, when an organ was installed at the old synagogue on Richmond, near Victoria Street (where the Vaughan Glaser's Theatre now stands) to enhance the beauty of the service. About twelve years ago, under the leadership of Rabbi Jacobs, men and women began to sit together at the services. Under the leadership of Rabbi Brickner, the Union Prayer Book was introduced and the congregation affiliated itself with the Union of American Hebrew

The first Sunday evening in December a meeting was held in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York to raise money for the relief of suffering Jews in Eastern Europe. Among the speakers were a prominent Catholic layman, the president of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ, and Bishop Manning to whom the occasion seemed one "of unusual significance." He said in his speech: "It is the first time so far as I know that a meeting has been held in any Christian cathedral specifically in behalf of the Jewish people."

So it seemed to the press, Jewish and English, and they hailed the event as one having wide significance, symbolizing the dawn of a bright new era of good relations between the Jews and Gentiles, et cetera. The Jewish Day was lifted up by the fact that "noble and sincere words have been spoken about the Jews in a cathedral, words which should re-echo in every corner of the globe. The road has now been opened and the first step to the hoped-for goal has been taken." The Jewish Daily News found the gathering significant because "it comes at a time when so much hatred against the foreign-born and against the Jews has made itself felt right here at home." The New York Sun said the meeting was "epochal" because it was the first meeting of its kind. The Times said that this meeting of Catholics and Protestants with Jews in aid of Jews "proclaims on the part of our foremost citizens and churches a freedom from the prejudice which has followed a race for centuries." The Telegram remarked on "how glad Benjamin Franklin and Thomas Jefferson, sturdy advocates of the separation of church and state, would be over this demonstration were they alive."

The editorials from which these bits were taken were long, amazed and deeply appreciative as befits the welcoming of a sunny day in human relations. They might just as well have been given over to conjecture as to why, in the year 1926 of the Christian era, it should be unusual for Christians to meet with Jews to help Jews, their fellow-beings. The papers don't go into raptures when collections are made outside of church walls for the benefit of people in distress. The American non-sectarian horn of plenty is constantly turning on a pivot and spilling as a matter of habit in the direction of help wanted. It has inclined toward the victims of flood, volcanic eruptions, tempests, toward Californians of all creeds, toward Catholic Belgians, the Japanese and the whites and blacks in Florida. If it is not surprising that people outside the church want to help the starving and helpless it should be even less surprising that people under the uplifting influence of church should feel brotherly toward the less fortunate. If, outside the church, it is elemental to answer a cry of distress without question, then certainly the same response should be expected of people who hear Sunday after Sunday "do unto others as you would have them do unto you."

It was perhaps a bit absent-minded on the part of Bishop Manning to confess that, in the year of his Lord 1926, it is most unusual for a selfless deed of mercy to take place in a Christian cathedral. It suggests to the critical an awfully long distance between the adoption of Christianity and its practical application.

A certain Toronto clergyman lately bewailed the tendency to do the Lord's day too little honour and the difficulty of keeping its observance in the Jewish districts. The trouble lies with the worshippers of the Lord's day, not with the Jews. The Jews observe Saturday as their day of rest, very rigorously in orthodox Toronto. Why should they observe two days of rest, one enforced? God himself would be the last to demand it. Where the Jews would be disturbing Gentile rest and quiet there is argument against any activity on their part on Sunday. But in solid Jewish districts is there any logical reason why Jews should observe a second Sabbath, one which is not theirs?

In many larger Jewish communities in the States it is the custom by city ordinance that the Jews who observe Saturday away from business need not regard Sunday as a rest day unless they want to. This plan will, doubtless, be adopted in Toronto before many more years. The Ontario which went dry by a huge majority in 1919 has gone wet in 1926 and those who favour blue laws now may think differently some day or be less powerful. For Sunday observance to be modified in Toronto it will take a spread of the opinion expressed by Justice Middleton when he quashed the conviction registered against Samuel Zuchart by Magistrate Cohen for selling tickets to a Sunday concert. Justice Middleton said: "I haven't much sympathy with this type of prosecution. The Hebrews are here and they have a right to choose the day on which they hold their weekly holiday." To which, amen. f.f.c.

Jewish State in Soviet Russia Promised by President Kalinin

The movement for the settlement of Jews on the land in Russia, had its conference last week in Moscow, which was attended by about 200 delegates from all parts of Russia, and about fifteen representatives from foreign countries. Speaking before this conference, Michael Kalinin, president of the Union of Soviet Republics, took the opportunity to explain the position of the Soviet authorities toward this plan. He insisted strongly on the national character of the proposed colonization movement and declared that the present Russian Government is anxious to maintain the cultural, social and political autonomy of the various nationalities that make up the population of the country. The Soviet Government does not want the assimilation of the Jews, but wishes to see them an autonomous nation in the Soviet Union. He declared that there was little anti-Semitism in Russia now, but that in the bourgeoisie and among the intelligentsia anti-Semitism is [illegible] during the Czaristic regime. "While the prime object of the colonization scheme is economic, to provide work for unemployed Jews, the government at the same time sympathizes with the national sentiment of the Jews and wishes to preserve the national character of the movement." He deplored the movement to draw Russian Jews to Palestine, "which holds for them only a promise of exploitation and poverty," while Russia, which has been their home for a millenium, offers to them all opportunities to build up their fatherland right within its borders.

As a gesture to the Russian Gentile world, Mr. Kalinin again stressed the point that the land allotted to the Jews was not of the best and quite inaccessible to the Russian peasant. Crimean land was not available to Russians because of the expense required in irrigation, while the Azov lands require a large outlay for drainage. He said that the foreign Jews are ready to come to the assistance of their Russian brethren and thus make it possible for them to occupy these tracts of land and make them fit for colonization. Should the foreign Jewish capitalist, however, fail them, the Russian Government will not leave the Jews to their fate.

M. Larin, a prominent Jewish Communist, declared that the Soviet Government is prepared to establish a national Jewish autonomous republic in Northern Crimea and the coterminous coast region bordering on the Sea of Azov. The plan was to settle 100,000 Jews in Northern Crimea and 200,000 in the Azov region, where an extensive drainage project is now being undertaken to occupy four years in construction and to cost about five million rubles. M. Larin admitted a recrudescence of anti-Semitic feeling in Russia and endeavoured to analyze it and find the reason for it. Kalinin has done his utmost to conciliate the peasants, and the "Agro-joint" have placed at the disposal of the peasants a number of instruments as well as technical instructors, by means of which it is hoped to remove the vestiges of ill-feeling still existing.

In the discussion that followed Kalinin's address, the foreign delegates insisted upon the most of the official attitude of the government and demanded that "the Jewish Republic" should become the slogan for the colonization movement, while the Jewish Communists argued that such a slogan would be most harmful at the present time. Dr. Jochelman, representing the London Committee, wished to obtain further information regarding the proposed Jewish territory and wanted to know whether Jews from foreign countries will be permitted to settle in this new republic. Merejin, the leader of the Jewish Communist section, replied that this would have to be decided later on, but that judging from past experience there is but little doubt that groups of foreign Jews will be allowed to settle on the land in the provinces assigned to Jews. The question of Zionism was also brought up and discussed and full credit was given to the Joint Distribution Committee, as well as to other bodies who are assisting in the great movement of Crimean colonization.

Soviet Charters Bank for Jewish Colonists

On the day following the foregoing address, President Kalinin announced the formation of the "Agrokustbank" for this purpose, with an initial capital of $750,000.

As the name implies, the bank will finance the agriculture and handicraft —kustarny—of the colonists. The bank is not a State concern but a joint-stock company, of which, it is true, a majority of the shares will be held by the State Bank, the Industrial Bank and the Peasants' Co-operative Bank, but a large block has already been allotted to private holders.

Foreigners are also allowed to participate, and although the delegates to the Jewish conference maintained a cautious reserve on the subject, it is obviously hoped that the scope and capital of the new organization will develop until finally it becomes the first national bank of the Jewish autonomous republic.

The Agrokustbank will immediately begin to handle the colonization funds from Russia and foreign sources and will undertake to transfer sums from Jews abroad to their relatives here at reduced rates.

It is understood that representatives of the American "Agrojoint" and European-Jewish Colonization Society will be offered places on the board of directors.

RUMANIAN GOVERNMENT AND ZIONISM

The Minister for Foreign Affairs, M. Titulescu, has received in Bucharest Mr. Leib Jaffe, Director of the Keren Hayesod, and declared to him that Rumania is sympathetic to the Zionist Movement, and is ready to assist in the establishment of the Jewish National Home.

Mr. Jaffe gave Mr. Titulescu a report on the present position in Palestine. He spoke in Hebrew, and Dr. Mihaschau, who accompanied him, translated what he said into Rumanian.

Congregations, the federation of reform synagogues. To-day two women serve as full-fledged trustees, and the congregation is in line with the best liberal thought.

All these changes indicate that Holy Blossom is dedicated to the belief that the revelation of Judaism is neither fixed nor complete, but that it is continuous. Every age added of its wisdom and spirituality to the religious tradition, known as Judaism. This generation may be no exception. It, too, may have its contribution to make to the stream of Jewish development.

Holy Blossom Synagogue is a traditional Jewish synagogue. It stands planted firmly and squarely on the traditions of Judaism. It recognizes the value and beauty of the past. But it does not believe that the present must be merely the echo of the past. Judaism is not a memorial. It is a living faith. Holy Blossom stands rooted in the past but is living in the present and looking forward to the future. As the rabbis and teachers and laymen of the past have contributed to Judaism, so can those of the present. Judaism is not a fixed system, immutable and unchangeable. It is a vital faith, sensitive and responsive to the new revelations, which God never ceases to dispense.

No mention of Holy Blossom would be complete without a tribute to the memory of the late Rabbi Solomon Jacobs, who for eighteen years served not only his congregation but all of Toronto and Ontario. A leader in patriotic activities, a genial personality, a lovable teacher, Rabbi Jacobs became one of the most influential men in Toronto, who had access to the leading men of Canada and who at all times used his influence to help his co-religionists. His successor, Rabbi Brickner, became the leader of all philanthropic work in the province and his stay here was characterized by a social worker as marking an epoch in the social service history of Toronto.

Holy Blossom has glorious traditions of service rendered, of forward-looking visions. Will the new generation, the fourth in the congregation, meet the challenge of the glorious past, and create a future that will leave to posterity a legacy as full of achievement as was theirs?

Louis Marshall justly enjoys the affection and appreciation of the mass of American Jewry. Together with Nathan Strauss and Louis D. Brandeis, he stands in the front row of American Jewish personalities. The Jews of Canada have had many opportunities to greet him and honour him before on the occasions of his missions of philanthropy in Canada. They join their American fellow Jews in extending to him their heartiest felicitations for a prolonged life of devotion to Jewish causes.

JEWISH STATE OR NATIONAL HOME

The question as to whether Zionists aim at establishing a Jewish State in Palestine or will be satisfied with a Jewish national homeland has again been brought to the fore by a heated debate that took place at the convention of Austrian Zionists, held in Vienna recently. Mr. Robert Stricker accused the present Zionist administration of straying away from the principles laid down by the late Dr. Herzl, having abandoned the central purpose of Zionism and demanded that it should again be emphasized that the ultimate aim of Zionism was the stablishment of a Jewish state in Palestine. Dr. Felix Rosenblueth, a member of the Zionist Executive, who was present at the conference, said that the conception of the Jewish State was impossible of attainment and the Executive therefore set itself the aim of creating in our generation the foundation of a Jewish National Home. A resolution condemning the present attitude of the Zionist Executive was then adopted by a four-fifths majority.

RUSSIAN MONARCHISTS RIOT IN PARIS

The Russian reactionary forces that have assembled in Paris are beginning to feel their strength and their first expression was in connection with anti-Jewish demonstrations which they conducted recently in Paris. During a memorial meeting which was arranged by the Jewish leaders in memory of the late Max Vinaver, a group of Russian Monarchists invaded the meeting and endeavored to break it up. Rabbi M. Eisenstadt and M. Slotzberg, who were the speakers on the occasion, were interrupted and the police made several arrests. A fight also ensued in which three Jews were injured.

The activity of the Monarchists is also shown in several public addresses which were delivered in Paris recently by members of that group, in which the Jews were made responsible for all the troubles that befell Russia as well as the world at large during the past few decades. A call has been issued to all Christians to form a union against the Jewish Freemasons, who seek to control the governments of the world.

It was noted that the Jews who were injured in the affray during the Vinaver Memorial meeting refused to press charges against their assailants, in order to prevent a slur on the Russians in Paris, from which all Russians there might ultimately suffer.

Prof. James Franck, University of Goettingen, and Prof. Gustav Hertz, of Halle University, are winners of the 1925 Nobel Prize for Physics.

Dr. Simon Dubnow, the famous Jewish historian, will be invited to occupy the chair for Judaica which is being inaugurated at the Kovno University.

CHANGES IN HUNGARY MAY AFFECT JEWS

The dissolution of the Hungarian Parliament and the endeavour on the part of Count Bethlen to reorganise the government on a more liberal basis is regarded with hope on the part of the Jews there. The Jewish deputy, Paul Sandor, believes that the wave of anti-Semitism in Hungary has practically spent itself and urges the Jews to be patient in the present crisis. Count Bethlen issued an invitation to Jewish leaders to join the newly-organized Liberal-Conservative coalition and the new law about the reorganization of the upper house makes provision for two Jewish representatives in the Senate.

At the same time, Count Bethlen issued a statement to the effect that the numerus clausus in Hungary will not be abolished until economic conditions improve considerably. The law, he said, was instituted to safeguard the interest of the Christian youth, who have been greatly reduced in circumstances. When the economic position of the country will improve the numerus clausus will automatically disappear. The Democratic party, which is opposed to Bethlen's policy, declared that his pronouncement with regard to the numerus clausus was cynical and the reasons for its retention being opposed to the elemental conceptions of human rights.

At a meeting last week in London, in honour of O. E. d'Avigdor Goldsmid, Dr. Eder, another member of the Zionist Executive, said that the Executive was bound by the Basle programme and the interpretations given to it by the various congresses. He criticized Mr. Greenberg, publisher of the "Jewish Chronicle," who insisted that the resignation of Dr. Rosenblueth be requested and said that the Zionist Organization owed Dr. Rosenbleuth a debt of gratitude for his plan of the Zionist Organization Month, which was inaugurated last year.

Charles Maurras, director of the anti-Semitic daily, "L'Action Française," was sentenced to one year's imprisonment for threats which he published in his paper against Abram Schramek, Minister of the Interior in the Painleve administration in 1925.

EMMA GOLDMAN AT HYGEIA HALL

Russia and the Russian drama are of the deepest interest to all thinking people of to-day. Miss Goldman, being of Russian origin, and having had the fortune of seeing most Russian plays at the Moscow Art Theatre, is well qualified to interpret the deep message contained in the works of Ostrovsky, Tolstoy, Chekhov, Gorky and Andreev.

But not only the Russian, also the American drama, which, though still very young, has already noteworthy achievements to its credit: Eugene O'Neill, Susan Glasspell, and others whose personalities and works Miss Goldman intends to discuss at her lectures.

"I regard her as one of the most notable women now extant upon this planet . . . a woman of wide and deep culture, a graceful and urbane writer, an idealist of a rare and often singularly winning sort."—H. L. Mencken, in The American Mercury.

Ford Answers Strauss, Denying He Attacked the Jewish People

Henry Ford struck back at Nathan Straus, New York philanthropist, for the latter's recent speech in Boston, in which he said the automobile magnate had been "misled into a campaign of slander against the Jewish people" and challenged Ford to select eight members of a committee of ten to weigh and decide the facts.

Responding to the jury idea, Ford said such a jury might not know if a "Jewish" question existed, and if it did would not dare to say so.

Straus said before the National Conference on Palestine, November 1, in Boston, that "Ford is using his wealth for vicious ends and is fomenting race hatred. The wealth of the Rockefellers is a blessing to America and all the world; that of Ford is destructive, because it has been used for the spread of hatred and not of peace."

Ford's answer, while not as an official interview, will appear in the Dearborn Independent, Ford's weekly, of December 25. A proof of it was handed out at the Ford offices to-day. The article charges among other things:

"That the international Jew is in direct control of all financial centres of Government, including the United States Federal Reserve System.

"That he pulls so many strings in business that no banker or business man feels safe to oppose him.

"That he either owns the press or controls it so that only pro-Jewish facts are ever admitted to print.

"That he controls the revolutionary elements of the world, on one hand, and the ultra-conservative elements on the other, so he has equal power in Communistic Russia and in capitalistic England, not to mention the theatre, motion picture or agriculture.

"That the international Jew is the chief control, therefore, in the making of war, of which he is also the chief profiteer."

"Issuing challenges was a favorite pastime with Jewish publicity hunters several years ago," says the Independent. "They quite innocently assumed, or wished the public to assume, that to ignore the challenge was a confession of error.

"The interesting point they overlooked was that a challenge has already been issued to them. The debate already has started, and one side of the argument is in.

"The Dearborn Independent, in a very full and pertinent statement, laid the matter before the only competent judges in this cause, namely, before the American people, and it is now proper for Jewish spokesmen to meet the issue by addressing their defense to the same judges. Issuing new challenges does not obscure the fact that a previous one still stands.

"To suggest, as Mr. Straus does, a smaller jury of New York clergymen and publicists, who do not know a Jewish question exists and would not dare to say so if they did, is merely to pretend to be issuing a challenge while evading one already issued to whom it may concern.

"Having, it is hoped, set Mr. Straus right as to the priority of the challenge, we should like to continue our friendly service by straightening him out on other points where he seems to be misled.

"For instance, he speaks of 'a campaign of slander against the Jewish people.' It is regretable that Mr. Straus has not striven for accuracy here. If every Jew were an international Jewish financier, then Mr. Straus would be justified in saying 'the Jewish people.' And if telling the truth is 'slander,' then Mr. Straus would be justified in the use of the term to describe the Dearborn Independent's disclosures. But as neither supposition can possibly be true, Mr. Straus's statement falls of its own weakness.

"The 'slander' consists of calling attention to the claims which the Jews have made for their pre-eminence in the world. These claims are largely true and have been made by responsible Jewish leaders. To repeat these for the benefit of other people cannot possibly be 'slander.'"

The article then asserts that the "international Jew" invented the current financial and interest system, and "is to-day in direct control of all financial centres of government, including the United States Federal Reserve system, which he organized and is now perfecting according to his original plan.

The "international Jew," the article continues, "is the most closely organized racial entity in the world, with an espionage system that covers every village and every larger centre in the country.

"These statements are deducible from the most deliberate utterances of Jewish spokesmen and illustrated at large by Jewish history. To agree with the Jewish claim to pre-eminence in these matters is no more 'slander' than to agree to their claim to pre-eminence in the clothing trade. Besides that it is a service to the American people to tell them who their bosses are.

"It might interest Mr. Strauss's suggested jury to take up the above statements, in their numerous counterparts in Jewish history and then compare the claims with the actual facts. This magazine will be glad to direct them to the sources."
